

Vaudeville Company Here Next Week

The famous LaReque Comedy and Vaudeville Company will be at the Tabb all next week and will render an entire change of program each evening. This is said to be one of the best companies on the road and a crowded house is expected at each performance. Each night at 7:00 o'clock there will be a band concert in front of the theatre. In conjunction with the vaudeville company the regular screen program will be given and popular prices will prevail. The play for the opening night is entitled, "Billy's Best Girl," and is said to be a stellar attraction.

THANKSGIVING AT THE MARY CHILES HOSPITAL

There is not an undertaking too big or generous for the citizens of Montgomery county. We had a look into the room that contained gifts expressive of loving and thankful hearts, and in that apartment were the generous gifts alike of the county citizenship and the city. We counted cans that contained fruits, vegetables, pickles in their varied makes, meats, soups, preserves, etc., numbering a hundred and more. Old hams, dressed and live poultry, pumpkins in varieties, many sacks of flour, meal, potatoes, etc., are the gifts. It is a real Thanksgiving day at the Mary Chiles Hospital with superintendent, nurses and attendants brimful and running over with gratitude. Guests are met with smiles significant of joy and gratitude, and the sweet goodbyes make the visitor to feel that it was good to be there and to contribute. With a one heartfelt though silent in expression we the people of Montgomery, a Kentucky county with open gate to the eastern picturesque mountains and to the west to the undulating blue grass section, give thanks and praise to Him who urged a loyal and true people on to these noble deeds.

FINANCIAL AID ASSURED

At a meeting of representatives of seven of the leading banks in Louisville, $1,500,000 was pledged, to the Burley Co-operative Association. The money is to be used as a revolving fund. The association has had before this offer propositions from Cincinnati, New York and other leading financial institutions, and the War Finance Corporation has offered aid.

Thanksgiving To Be Fittingly Celebrated

Today, Thanksgiving, is being fittingly celebrated in this city, the banks, postoffice, court house and many business houses being closed all day, while in the afternoon practically everything will be closed. Special religious services will be held at the Christian church in the morning, with preaching by Rev. J. W. Crates, of the Methodist church. Many will enjoy the day as one of rest, while quite a number of "nimrods" will take advantage of the day-off to enjoy a day of hunting. Quite a few of the "sports" will go to Lexington to see the State-Tennessee football game, but as a rule the day will be observed as one of rest.

MRS. HEFLIN'S MOTHER DIES

Mrs. Fielding Branch, aged 71 years, mother of Mrs. E. W. Heflin, of this city, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Florence Dearing, in Fleming county, Monday from paralysis. Besides Mrs. Heflin, Mrs. Branch is survived by three other children, Mrs. Dearing, James and Dave Branch, of Fleming county. Mr. and Mrs. Heflin attended the funeral and burial.

Armsteads Score Quite a Hit

Gladys Armstead and her Novelty Concert Orchestra furnished the music at the Tabb Theatre last evening and made a big hit with the audience. The picture for the occasion "Heliotrope," was one of the best screened here for a long time and got next to many a tender heart. For this occasion and today's program Manager Small had the stage elaborately decorated with potted plants, electrically lighted, many and beautiful shaded lamps and elegant furniture presenting a wonderfully rich appearance. The Tabb Theatre never looked as pretty as it did on this occasion and we were indeed sorry so small an audience was present to view the lovely scene and enjoy the delightful program—however, they will have another opportunity today to see the elaborately decorated stage and another wonderful picture program.

East Kentucky Game Paradise

Rabbits and quail are more plentiful in the mountains of Eastern and Southeastern Kentucky than they have been for many years, according to hunters who have traversed the section within the last few days.

Laurel, Knox, Whitley and Bell counties have an especially large number of quail and rabbits, hunters declare, and the border lands along Bell and Whitley counties adjoining Virginia and Tennessee are a paradise for game.

Added to the rabbit and quail are a number of large flocks of wild turkeys. According to the reports, the wild turkeys have been located with more frequency in Whitley and Laurel counties than the others of that section. The area about the Cumberland river in these two counties has proven to be the favorite haunts of the turkeys, according to hunters who have been in that section.

Squirrels are plentiful in all heavy wooding Chestnuts and walnuts are plentiful. As yet only a few hunters have gone into this region, especially in Laurel and Bell counties, where the residents offer no objections to the hunters, appreciating the number of rabbits they kill. Many of the residents recently planted orchards and have experienced a great deal of difficulty in protecting their fruit and other vegetation from the rabbits which have become so numerous.

Quails as yet still remain in the open fields and have not yet migrated to the woodlands. These counties, according to expert hunters, are the best spots for game in the state, and hunters returning there will find certain reward for their trouble.

Owensboro Leaf Bids Strengthen

Prices for Green river tobacco the second day of the sales on the Owensboro market showed a tendency to increase.

The sale of 144,315 pounds at the last warehouse brought an average of $18.30 per 100 pounds.

During the two days 952,715 pounds of dark tobacco have been sold. The growers have received $160,196.17, making a general average of $16.81 per 100 pounds. The first two days last year the general average was around $7.

There are more than 1,500,000 pounds remaining to be sold on the floors. Tobacco is coming in from every section of the district and the buyers and warehousemen are warning growers not to glut the market, telling them it will cause a falling off in prices. The competition on the Owensboro market is very keen. All of the big companies are represented, and the bidding on every basket is very spirited.

Good leaf continues to sell at between $20 and $30 with some of the tobacco of unusually good quality going above $50.

ANTI-MEDICAL BEER MEASURE SIGNED

The legality of the use of beer as medicine was settled yesterday when President Harding signed the measure as coming from congress.

The bill signed in addition to outlawing medical beer provides that not more than one-fourth gallon of vinous liquor or vinous or spirituous liquors separately or in the aggregate containing more than one-half pint of alcohol may be prescribed in ten days; that physicians shall be limited to one hundred prescriptions for such liquor in ninety days unless extraordinary reason is presented; that importation of vinous or spirituous liquor is prohibited until the amount on hand shall not be sufficient to supply the current need of non-beverage uses; that private residences may not be searched without a search warrant and that the courts of Hawaii and the Virgin Islands are given jurisdiction to enforce the national prohibition act.

Al G. Field Minstrels Coming To The Tabb

The American stage has been brightened for thirty-four glad years with the presence thereon of the Al G. Field Minstrels. This is the thirty-fifth consecutive season for this famous organization which comes to the Tabb Theatre soon.

Al G. Field has honestly earned the sobriquet of the "Dean of Minstrelsy" and the announcement of the impending arrival of his show in any community is the occasion for whole-souled rejoicing on the part of that large share of the American public which enjoys to the full a good song well sung, a witty joke, a real minstrel dance and all-round clean, wholesome fun.

The present version of the Al G. Fields Minstrels is the acme of this form of theatrical entertainment and has been pronounced by press and public as the best production of its kind ever offered to the public. It has been staged with an eye to all that is best in the traditions of minstrelsy with the addition of the best of up-to-date novelties and innovations which make for consistent modern popularity.

The big first part of the show this year has been built about the age-old glory that is New Orleans, the Madri Gras, and the setting for this phase of the show is sheer delight for those who know anything about the annual Louisiana festa, as well as for those who love beauty in any form. Pageantry has been mingled with song and dance and revelry in their highest exposition, and the Field company is at its best in exemplifying this joyous midwinter fun festival.

Other features of the production is a dancing divertissement programmed "The Hunt," which gives a free rein to the best the Field company has in the way of dancing ability. It should be added that the company boasts some of the best dancers on the stage today and Terpsichorean Director William Doran has originated and staged many new forms of the art for the current production.

The company is again headed by Bert Swor, a comedian without a peer in his line. Then, too, there are such favorites with Field audiences as Jack Richards, Billy Church, Nick Huffend, Jimmie Cooper, Leslie Berry, Johnny Healy, John Cartmell, Roddy Jordan, Ed Jones, Carl Cameron, Boni Maek and a host of others.

Burley Warehouses Agree Not To Open

Kentucky tobacco warehouses in the hurley district will close until the co-operative association is fully formed and ready to take over the houses.

This was decided at Lexington on Wednesday by an overwhelming vote in the meeting of the warehousemen called to confer with a committee from the association. Out of 111 warehouses represented, 108 agreed not to open their doors to receive hurley tobacco until the association was formed and the three others agreed not to open until December 15.

After considerable discussion as to the basis on which the warehouses would be taken over by the association, a committee was appointed and it recommended in its report that no definite immediate action be taken on this, but that it be left to the warehousemen and a committee from the association working in co-operation.

ONLY FIVE DAYS

are left in which to pay your taxes and save the penalty. Only about one-fourth of the taxes have been paid, and unless you come in at once you may not escape the penalty, which goes on December 1. Come in today.

A DAY OF GRATITUDE FOR MANY BLESSINGS BESTOWED

Governor Morrow has issued the following Thanksgiving proclamation:

"Thanksgiving Day, sanctified by time, hallowed by tender recollections, sacred with memories of mother, fireside and childhood.

"Thanksgiving Day; a people with their steps and thoughts turned homeward and from the hearthstone and altar His children raised their prayers to our Father in Heaven.

"Gratitude, thankfulness, a sense of obligation, acknowledgment for the blessings of the harvest, for health preserved, for free institutions maintained, for national life and for peace within and without our borders.

"In the spirit of this day I call upon the people of Kentucky on November 24, 1921, to gather together as friends, as neighbors and citizens to lift our prayers of praise and gratitude to Him who holds His children in the hollow of His hand, and who has so bountifully blessed us during another year."

CAMPBELL FARMERS GIVE ATTENTION TO LIMESTONE

Limestone as a factor in increasing crop yields has received a record amount of attention from Campbell county farmers during the past fall with the result that much benefit is expected to result from its use, according to a report by County agent H. F. Link. Definite steps toward giving this fertilizer a place in boosting the crop yields of the county were first taken when lime pulverizers were put to work in different communities. Three of them owned by individual farmers or groups of farmers crushed nearly 1,000 tons of the material.

As a further step in making the material of increased value to farmers of the county a number of demonstrations to be conducted by farmers who are co-operating with the extension division of the College of Agriculture have been planned. These demonstrations which include those involving the use of limestone on practically all crops grown in the county are expected to answer many important questions arising in connection with the use of the material.

Tobacco Pool Likely In Full Swing By Dec. 15

The burley tobacco area of Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana was divided into 22 districts Saturday night by the committee on districting and elections, but the date of the elections was not agreed upon but left to a later meeting of the committee.

Decision in the matter of the districts came after three days of deliberation, in which effort was made to harmonize all differences of opinion as to what was best to be done in the alignment of the counties with each other. The committee's decision was unanimous and came after three days of deliberation.

The committee is composed of T. S. Burnam, Madison county, chairman; Bush W. Allin, Mercer county; Martin L. Harris, of Indiana; Albert Day, of Mason county; Joseph Passonneau, organization manager, of Fayette county.

The districts as finally agreed upon and announced Saturday night are as follows, in order named, and showing the number of pounds pooled:

Fayette, 10,812,540; Bourbon, 10,019,346; Shelby, 9,608,110; Mason, 7,236,567; Scott, 6,971,951; state of Ohio, 6,700,000; state of Indiana, 6,400,000; Woodford and Franklin, 10,204,887; Owen and Carroll, 8,498,435; Henry and Trimble, 9,710,672; Grant, Gallatin, Boone, Kenton and Campbell, 8,637,859; Harrison and Pendleton, 9,291,647; Bracken, Robertson and Nicholas, 10,139,920; Bath and Montgomery, 9,970,475; Fleming, Lewis, Carter and Greenup, 7,048,140; Garrard, Lincoln and Casey, 7,414,192; Boyle and Mercer, 7,006,931; Anderson, Washington, Marion, Taylor and Green, 7,744,732; Jessamine, Madison, Rockcastle, Jackson and Laurel, 6,707,145; Spencer, Jefferson, Bullitt and Nelson, 6,970,822; Hardin, Hart, Meade, Breckinridge, Grayson, Barren, Metcalfe, Cumberland and Larnie, 6,637,859; Clark, Powell, Menifee and Estill, 5,223,000. Total pounds pooled to date, 180,323,624.

The Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, which finished its preliminary work last week by the pooling of more than 180,000,000 pounds of tobacco of the less than 210,000,000 pounds grown in the burley district in 1920, is the largest single co-operative association in the world, with 42,000 members and the probability that it can have between 8,000 and 10,000 more if it decides to permit those who so far have failed to sign up their crops with the association to come into the association.

The association covers probably a wider territory than any other co-operative body. The production of the entire district ranges from 170,000,000 pounds in the poor years to 300,000,000 pounds when there is a full acreage and crop conditions are favorable.

Aaron Sapiro, the California lawyer and co-operative genius under whose guidance the burley growers organized, has said that it would be worth between 20 and 30 millions of dollars to the tobacco men to form an organization for the orderly marketing of their crops. This statement of Sapiro has been borne out by the fact that tobacco which sold on the Lexington market in January, 1921, for two to three cents a pound has been resold by speculators who bought it at twelve to eighteen cents a pound when the manufacturers happened to want that kind of tobacco. It is believed the growers lost twenty millions of dollars in Kentucky alone last year by their inability to hold their crops off the market, as many of their leaders advised them to do.

CORN AND SOYBEANS ARE GOOD PRODUCERS OF PORK

Hogging off corn and soybeans is a means of rapid and economical pork production, according to results being obtained by C. T. Hull, a Marion county farmer, who is cooperating with County Agent H. J.
 Childress and the extension division of the College of Agriculture in conducting a demonstration to show the value of this method. Five representative animals in a group which is being used to hog off a field of corn and soybeans gained a total of 218 pounds or 43 pounds each during three weeks and three days of the demonstration. They made a total gain of 9.9 pounds or almost two pounds each day during the trial.
 Some of them gained more than two pounds a day during the three weeks of the experiment.

CARELESS PRACTICES MEAN SERIOUS WASTE OF MANURE

Leaching, heating, fire-fanging and the failure of farmers to spread the material as soon as possible results in an annual loss of approximately three-fourths of the farm manure produced in Kentucky, according to R. E. Stephenson, soils and crops specialist at the College of Agriculture. Not more than one-fourth or about 2,500,000 tons of the manure produced is dropped in stalls or otherwise saved so that it can be hauled and spread on the land where it is most needed, according to the specialist. However, a large amount is dropped on pastures and in the open field where cattle are fed and is, therefore, not a complete loss, although it is not used as efficiently as it might be. More careful attention to the proper care of this important farm fertilizer affords farmers of the state a splendid opportunity for increasing their profits, according to Mr. Stephenson.

The greatest manure loss results from the fact that few farmers make sufficient effort to save the material and spread it on the fields where crops are produced. Large amounts of it are allowed to accumulate about the barnyard and strawstack and in other places. Since the most efficient place to save the manure is on a field which is producing a crop best results will be obtained by hauling and spreading it as often as possible. When manure cannot be spread as rapidly as it accumulates
 a specially constructed manure pit or shed will be found helpful in conserving the plant food which it contains.

Leaching is another one of the channels through which farm manure is wasted, much of the material becoming inferior in quality because of the loss of liquid matter. This liquid contains one-half of the value of the manure and in order to properly save it farmers should prepare tight floors of clay or concrete and then use large amounts of bedding.

some of the bedding will be consumed as feed and the remainder tramped into the manure to absorb the liquid portion.

Heating or fire-fanging which results when manure is piled in loose heaps also results in losses of the farm fertilizer. The heated manure gives off ammonia which carries with it large amounts of valuable nitrogen. This loss may be prevented by allowing the stock to tramp the manure so that it will be compact and by keeping it moist until it is spread on the field.

HOME-GROWN SPUD SEED IS EQUAL TO IMPORTED STOCK

By using the proper care in the selection and handling of seed stock potato growers in Jefferson county as well as in other sections of Kentucky can grow seed for export or at least maintain their stock at a standard as high as that maintained by growers in northern states, according to conclusions reached by members of the Jefferson County Certified Seed Potato Growers' Association, who co-operated with the extension division of the College of Agriculture in conducting comparative tests with high-grade home-grown and Minnesota-grown seed.
 Results of the first year's demonstrations were discussed at a recent meeting of the association and while direct comparison between the two types of seed was not possible in all cases because of the slight differences in planting time and soil, sufficient data was obtained to show
 those who co-operated the possibilities of high-class seed from their own county.

In 16 cases where fair comparisons could be made, three men reported a slight superiority of Jefferson county-grown seed over the imported stock, eight men could report no difference and five men reported a slight advantage of the northern-grown seed over that grown at home. Following a discussion of the results members of the association concluded that the use of high-class, home-grown seed would give equally as good results as the use of imported seed provided proper attention was given to the care and selection of seed stock.

Members of the association consider the first year's work which they have carried on to be highly successful and by next year they hope to increase their stock to the point where they can enter the market of furnishing certified seed potatoes.
 This year they have been compelled to refuse orders for three carloads of certified seed because of their

THANKSGIVING

Reader, let us backward look, and as we peer into the past, step by step, consider the numerous blessings. Can you count them? Nay, verily. We have health and happiness; the fields have yielded their bounties, peace broods over the land and the Christian religion, salvation is ours for the asking. These blessing countless as they are give cause for real thanksgiving to Him who giveth

"The days of infancy are all a dream,
How fair, but Oh! how short they seem:

'Tis life's sweet opening spring.

The days of youth advance;

The bounding limb, the ardent glance,

The kindling soul they bring—

It is life's burning summertime.

Manhood—matured with wisdom's fruit,

Reward of learning's deep pursuit—

Succeeds, as autumn follows summer's prime.

And that, and that, alas! goes by,

And what ensues? The languid eye,

The failing frame the soul o'ercast;

'Tis winter's sickening, withering blast,

Life's blessed season—for it is the last."

Thus are the period in life, just the seasons come and go, each with their blessings, and for them and to Him is thankfulness due, and thanksgiving is only meagre at its very best.

The president of a Boston university is thus quoted: "There never was a time when women dressed as sensibly as in 1921," a refreshing utterance, a creed to the common sense of college president; a rebuke to the cheap humorists who roast women's fashions, no matter what they are.

Do not mistake the "gift of gab," whether in yourself or others, for clean, clear-cut, sensible conversation.

Movie producers have come to the conclusion that there are too many vampires in the pictures. It is only fair to say that the public came to this conclusion some time ago.

Wealthy Indian To Have Fling

Jackson Barnett, Oklahoma's richest Indian, has gone to Kansas City to have a fling at metropolitan luxuries. If he finds that he can stand it, Barnett will make it permanent—with the consent of the United States government, of which he is a ward.

Barnett until recently lived in a two-story block house at Henryetta, thirty miles from Muskogee, wore cheap clothes, smoked cheap tobacco and didn't even own a phonograph—which is an odd way to live for one who is rated as worth $5,000,000. While at Henryetta he was satisfied in his two rooms and let his guardian, attorneys and agents of the Indian agency in Muskogee and Washington worry about the millions flowing from oil wells on his property.

His wants were few and the money went into the banks of Oklahoma on deposits made by the Indian agency to his credit.

When the war was on thousands of dollars of his money went into Liberty bonds and War Savings stamps. Contributions were made to institutions of learning, and Jackson lived the simple life, never going more than a few miles from his cabin.

Then he met Mrs. Anna Laura Lowe and they married. "Kidnaping" is what Barnett's agents called it. Barnett was held under restraint until Victor M. Locke, Jr., became superintendent of the Indian agency in Muskogee. Locke decided:

"A wealthy Indian has as much right to spend his money as wealthy white men."

Barnett and his wife and her daughter sought to make a dent in the $5,000,000 pile. Mrs. Barnett and her husband needed a change, and the government consented to a vacation in Canada. After that vacation the Indian was unhappy for the first time in his life and refused to go back to the cabin and cheap clothes.

"We are going to let the Indian himself decide where he wants to live," Superintendent Locke said. "If he wants to live in Muskogee, all right. If he chooses some other city we have nothing to say in the way of objection, for he has the right to make his own decisions."

If a suitable residence can be found in Kansas City it will be purchased by the government for its wealthy ward. Otherwise, a house will be built.

"There's no truth in the report that we are going to spend $200,000 for a residence for Jackson Barnett," Locke said, "but we are going to see to it that he has a house in keeping with his wealth and one with which he will be satisfied."

LOUISVILLE MAYOR TAKES OFFICE

Huston Qnin yesterday was inaugurated mayor of Louisville, succeeding George Weissinger Smith.

Judge Charles H. Moorman, successor to Judge Qnin in the Appellate Court, who directed the Republican campaign which resulted in the election of Mr. Qnin and every other Republican candidate for city offices, administered the oath of office.

The inaugural ceremony, which was brief, was held for the first time in the open. A platform was erected in front of the mayor's office at the city hall and it was upon this that the retiring Mayor Smith gave the keys of the city to his successor. Vehicular traffic on Jefferson street, in front of the city hall, was suspended by order of the police to permit a throng of persons to witness the inauguration.

PLEADS UNWRITTEN LAW

A story of the alleged infidelity of his wife and his most intimate friend was recounted on the witness stand yesterday at Lawrenceburg by Walter Griffey, 28 years old, farmer, on trial charged with the murder of Eula Bereaw, 21 years old.

Pleading both self-defense and the "unwritten law" to justify his action in killing the man he always regarded as a brother, Griffey told of his alleged discovery of Bereaw and his wife in her boudoir at the Griffey home late one night.

He intercepted Bereaw upon the street the night of the murder, he said, intending to upbraid him for breaking a promise, and killed him when he reached toward his pocket as if for a weapon, Griffey said.

A number of witnesses corroborated Griffey's statement regarding Bereaw's attempt to reach for a pistol in his pocket.

Business Malingering

Peter says, "Business is good;" Paul replies, "Business is rocky." Neither is wholly right; business is just what we choose to make it when we quit grouching and put our shoulders to the wheel. Business has never been improved by grumpy pessimists or by lop-sided optimists; it is improved only by workers—enthusiastic workers.

There is a lot of business that is really sick, still staggering with the shell shock of war and the debauch of extravagance, but there is a good deal more that is merely malingering. What we need more than anything else is just common sense, courage and confidence. There is, of course, the greatest era of expansion and prosperity ahead that the world has ever seen. Everyone knows this and the only question discussed is when it will start. Well, it's time to go out and meet it and to give it a hearty greeting.

Nothing can withstand the coming tide, but grouchers can retard its approach somewhat. Welcome the coming era, speed the departing gloom. Let's have less of "Thou shalt not," and more of "Come on, let's go."

BOURBON COUNTY FARM

LIVE STOCK, CROP AND IMPLEMENTS

Tuesday, November 29, 1921
At 10 O'clock A. M.

Deciding to quit farming, the undersigned has placed in our hand for absolute sale on Tuesday, November 29th, 1921, at 10 A. M.

his farm of 236 acres, more or less, located on the Prescott pike, 1 mile east of North Middletown.

This farm will be sold in two tracts and then as a whole, as follows:

Tract No. 1 consists of 50 acres, more or less, improved by a 5-room tenant house and one stock barn. This land is all in grass except 18 acres which was broken from old Bluegrass sod last year.

Tract No. 2 consists of 186 acres of land, improved by a ten-room frame residence, in good condition, 1 pair stock scales, 1 20-acre tobacco barn and large stock barn, 1 corn crib, tenant house and all other necessary outbuildings in good repair. This tract is well watered, having a cistern at house and one at the barn, and plenty of stock water.

This farm is located in a good neighborhood, close to schools and churches. Practically every acre is tobacco land. The entire farm is under good fencing.

At the same time and place we will sell the following live stock and farm implements: 22 1,000-pound feeders, 28 sheep, 2 bucks, 4 good seven-year-old mules, 3 ponies, 1 old brood mare, 1 filly three years old, 1 gelding 2 years old, 1 farm wagon and frame, 2 mowing machines, 1 rake, 1 sled, 1 set blacksmith tools, breaking plows, gears and many other things too numerous to mention.

DAIRY FARMERS HAVE RARE SOIL BUILDING ADVANTAGES

Dairy farmers in Kentucky have an exceptional opportunity of building up the poor soils and improving the good ones on their farms by giving sufficient attention to the care and saving of manure produced by the cows in their herds, specialists on farm problems say. A well-fed dairy cow will produce approximately 12 tons of manure each year, 10 tons of which should be saved to place on cultivated fields since the animals are housed at least half of the years. This can be accomplished only by saving the liquid as well as the solid manure, since fully one-half of the manure's value is in the liquid. The dairy industry in Kentucky which is now recognized as an important aid to soil building has 650,000 cows as its nucleus at the present time.

Manure saving presents a complex problem to the dairyman inasmuch as he wishes to produce clean milk as well as retain the fertility of his farm. The manure must be removed daily from the stall and provisions made other than an open barnyard for preserving it until it is spread on the field. A successful dairyman will have a tight floor in his barn which is usually made of concrete and contains a gutter with proper drainage from behind the animals. For sanitary reasons the drainage is desirable but since the liquid contains valuable fertilizing elements it must be saved if the system is to be economical. This can be accomplished by emptying the drain into a pit or cistern built near the barn where the solid manure together with the straw bedding, is stored until the dairyman is ready to haul it to the field. In order to operate this system with the least trouble it is necessary to have a track and litter carrier from the barn to the pit. A system of this kind will require the use of a large amount of bedding, eight to ten pounds of straw daily for each cow being a good amount to use.

A covered shed for storing manure may be made with a large floor and then used for a stock shelter, this arrangement making it possible for the stock to keep the manure packed so as to exclude air and preserve it in better condition. A shed 12 feet wide and 20 feet long provided with a tight floor should be large enough for a 20-cow dairy and give satisfactory results, according to specialists at the College of Agriculture. Another method for saving manure is to build a concrete basin about two feet deep without any roof where the manure can be stored until it is hauled and spread. This is an inexpensive and efficient method for preserving the material.

There are a lot of long-faced Christian in this world who do not seem to understand that being good will make you happy. Happiness comes from doing good.

Old Jim's third wife was dead. All three had been cross-eyed. Two of them—the first two—had been sisters. It seemed as though Jim was obsessed over crossed eyes. A wife without crossed eyes would not seem a lawful wife. Crossed eyes had not crossed his business luck, at any rate, for Old Jim was worth at least $100,000.

And he could not write his name or measure a load of the lumber which had brought him his fortune.

But he had a way of managing things so the profit balance came out with large per cent. He was very thrifty—so thrifty that when he had the third casket to buy he sought some way to economize.

In his estimation, funeral expenses were wasted expenditure.

He immediately sought the undertaker. This learned gentleman was unbothered by the casket of the third cross-eyed wife. Old Jim approached him with no squeamishness.

"Say, John, how much are the handles on the casket valued at?"

John dropped the claw hammer on his big toe and said things not supposed to be said in the presence of caskets. Then:

"I dunno; they allers come on—the same sort on the same sort of caskets; never had any special orders."

Old Jim viewed the handles as though with begrudging envy. "Well, John, it's awful foolish to bury them handles. Casket handles should be detachable—should be kept with the stands for holding the casket during the service. You just take them off and return them—after the folks has left the cemetery—before you fill the grave. Send them back and get them discounted from the bill."

John carefully straightened some nails he had drawn from the casket box before he replied:

"All right, Jim; maybe it will save enough to pay the minister next time."

Jim lit his pipe, drew in a whiff of smoke, exuding it from his nostrils, throw the match out the window and departed in seeming blank-mindedness. John slammed the door with: "The d—d—d—d I don't know what!" The next winter the undertaker died with influenza. His wife had no nephew and Old Jim Fuller bought a large box of small assorted hardware. Among the articles were the casket handles, which he had now paid for twice—both times unknowingly. The village doctor spied the handles and offered Old Jim a dollar for them.

A short time after this, Old Jim brought home wife No. 4. Strange it was, her eyes were straight—straight from a clear brain. She proceeded to make the money—and other things, including Old Jim—fly. First, she bought a load of nice, expensive wallpaper and paint and sent for the village decorator. He came without his papering board, for he knew Old Jim had brought a fine board home from the mill for the cross-eyed wives to do the papering in by-gone days. He knew it was in the attic. The new Mrs. Fuller accompanied the decorator to the gurnet in search of the board. The man pointed to a long row of old hats and bonnets hanging on some nails under the eaves.

"You see them bunnets? Yours will be hanging on that next empty nail some day in your company."

The cross-eyed wife's eyes almost burned. "Bunnets" with lightning flashes. She grabbed them all—her two arms full, some hanging by withered strings, and flung them from the window, when they slowly floated toward the mill-dam.

"Not by a dam-site!" she said, with a grim grin. "Jim's hat will hang there!"

In a moment they had discovered the papering board. The paperhanger continued his free informing: "This board has held all the bodies of Jim's wives. They were all laid out on it. It will hold you some day. Then it followed the 'bunnets'."

In a box near the board were some paste brushes and a pair of casket handles. The straight black eyes bulged.

"What—what are those?" The paperhanger pretended not to hear. A female hurricane swept toward him.

"If you must know, they are the handles of the last wife's casket—saved to put on yours." The handles did not follow the "bunnets" and the board. A laugh, as when the lightning hits a granite rock and skids down its sides, split the air. The three cross-eyed wives had wept little April showers, most days in their dreary, drudging lives. The straight-eyed wife went down to the telephone and ordered a new house—the best in the stable—a harness and a new buggy. Those were the times before cars were invented or the buggy would have been a limousine.

Old Jim, that winter, fell and broke several ribs. Complications set in and his hat hung on the attic nail. He was buried in a cheap coffin—exactly like that of his third wife's. It was delivered without handles. The handles from the attic lowered his casket in the grave. The straight-eyed wife straightway found a new husband, sold the house where three stoop-shouldered, sad and cross-eyed wives had slaved, and departed to another town. The handles were at last beyond resurrection.

Old Jim's thrift was applied to himself.

OUTGOING-HOMECOMING OF THE CHILDREN

Did you ever watch pigeons circling about the pigeon house, and listen to their cooing before they settled down for the night? The flying in and out of the pigeons suggests "the gaid outgoing—sweet homecoming" of childhood, around the mother's knee. Froebel recognized in this scene a symbol of life, a lesson for us, as mothers, which we cannot study too faithfully.

The "outgoing" and the "homecoming," there is a world of meaning each word. Do you send your children out each day, to school or to play, happily, trustingly, lovingly? Is he glad to go, but gladder still to return? What sort of a homecoming does he have? Aren't we, mothers, too apt to make that homecoming full of scoldings for tardiness, or nagging over table deportment, or rushing the children off to bed so we can have the evening to ourselves? Those things seem of small importance, but wouldn't it be of more lasting value to us and to our children if, instead, we made of that homecoming a happy summary of the day's affairs?

There is no child who is not glad to tell what he has been doing all day. If he has been at school there are often little difficulties, little vexations that the teacher has not had time to satisfactorily explain or smooth out. A word or two from mother may make it all clear and right. And if he has been at play there will be so many things to tell. It is while out at play that the child becomes acquainted with the fascinating realm of out-of-doors. The flowers, birds, trees, bees and butterflies—he may become closer acquainted with them all through the retelling of his experiences among them. Wouldn't he be more interested in insect life if he knew the life history of the butterfly or of the ant with its almost human arrangement of work and home? Wouldn't he find more satisfaction in the fields if he knew that there were weeds that ate bugs and some that lived on other plants, like selfish folks? And wouldn't you like to have him so form the habit of telling you things that he goes on telling them, even after he passes out of childhood? Wouldn't you like to be the one he always comes back to for understanding and intelligent enlargement of his small ideas?

And isn't it in this deep abiding faith in mother and father and in the intimate comradeship with the outside world, that the faith in the Infinite is born? Perhaps, in childhood, the connection between the Creator of the Universe and a white fringed, golden-hearted daisy may pot be overly clear, but if the connection is made at all, if the child sees the manifestation of the Divine in all the forces of nature, it will not be such a far cry to discovering such manifestations in his own soul. Then, as you help him to weave his daily experiences into a happy whole at the day's end, so may his larger experiences fashion themselves into a life pattern that he will not be ashamed to show to himself or his Creator at the "twilight hour" of life.—Nelia Gardner White.

STOPPING GULLIES PREVENTS FURTHER EROSION OF FIELDS

Fall and winter rains which will soon start gullies in many fields on Kentucky farms make it necessary for farmers to take immediate steps to stop the erosion if they wish to prevent further damage to their land, soils and crops experts say. At the present time there are approximately 2,500,000 acres of eroded land in the state, an acreage that should be decreased rather than increased if farms of the state are to continue to produce big yields of crops. Few valuable plants or crops will thrive on gullied fields, the specialists say.

Since the season for the seeding of cover crops is past for the year it will be necessary for farmers to take other means to stop gullies in their fields, according to R. E. Stephenson, soils specialist at the College of Agriculture. Small gullies may be filled with brush, straw, briars, weeds, waste fodder or any other coarse material available. Cedar brush with the tops placed up the slopes to catch the washed soil make good breaks for filling gullies. Larger gullies and ditches should have more substantial breaks, especially where damage is apt to be heavy. Piles of stones at intervals serve satisfactorily for this purpose. In extreme cases it is advisable to put in concrete work to stop soil washing.

Worm Is Called Man's Superior

"There isn't a scientist in the world who does not agree that if the earthworm was destroyed the world would become sterile and the people of this world would be starving in seven years. He is the one necessary creature in God's world. He fertilizes the land covers the bare rocks with earth. He is the surest friend of mankind that we know."

These amazing statements are made by a character in "The Man Who Hated Earthworms," published in an English magazine.

The whole world harren but for the action of the humble earthworm! An astonishing statement, yet it is no exaggeration.

Without them the whole world would be a dreary, lifeless expanse of rocks gravel, sand and clay. The only inhabitants of the world would be the fish and other water creatures.

Such was the case millions of years ago, when, first of all creatures, the worms crawled out from the seas to try existence upon dry land.

The great peculiarity of the worm is that he eats his way underground, filling his body with small particles, from which he is able to extract nourishment in a very wonderful way. He has a gizzard much like that of the fowl, and in it he makes use of small hard stones, just as the fowl does, to act as grinders. The result is that the particles which pass in through his mouth are soon ground to the finest powder, from which his intestines extract all the food that his body needs.

When the grinding and digestive processes are complete, he returns to the surface and discharges in the form of the familiar worm-cast all the matter that is useless for food.

Thus every worm is a tiny living mill, constantly engaged in grinding up clay and sand until they are fine enough to become soil. Vegetable matter must be mixed with them, and this again the worm does for us.

You have probably often noticed a leaf sticking out of the burrow which a worm has made in a lawn or a flowerbed. This is the door of his home; he likes to plug his hole in this way.

If you move the soil very carefully you will find portions of other leaves which he has dragged underground to eat.

Before making his meal he softens the leaf by means of a juice which he secretes; then he devours it, eating at the same time quantities of earth. The cast which he subsequently leaves on the surface of the ground consists not of sand or of clay, but of a mixture of these and vegetable matter; it is true soil.

Once soil has been made it must be turned over frequently, or it grows sour. That is why we dig our gardens and plow our fields. Ages before man invented the spade or the plow, the humble worm was tilling the soil, keeping it sweet, and making it richer and more fertile.

In gardens there are about 50,000 worms to each acre, while in the fields every acre contains about 30,000 of them.

By collecting and carefully weighing all the casts thrown up on a measured piece of ground over a long period, Darwin arrived at the amazing result that worm-casts raise the level of the whole land one-fifth of an inch a year!

More wonderful still, the work of worms throws up no less than ten tons of soil in the form of casts on each acre of land during a single year. In a small five-acre field the worm population brings to the surface no less than fifty carloads of the finest soil in twelve months!

The most important of all creatures, then, is the lowly worm, on whose labors all the rest depend for their food.

If he were to die out, the whole earth would, in a short space of time, become a great silent, lifeless Sahara.
